In Appreciation

Emma Scott Raff (Mrs. George C. Nasmith), the founder of the original Margaret Eaton School, passed away on February 16th, 1940. While the nature of the school has changed in the years since she gave up her connection with it, her influence continues to live in the lives of those who studied with her. Her love of beauty, beauty of expression, beauty of vision and beauty of the spirit, communicated itself to those around her as she taught and worked with them. We will not say the world is poorer because of her passing, but rather the world is richer for her living because her graduates have gone to far places and carried with them her desire for 'the true and the beautiful'.

HISTORY

The Margaret Eaton School, named after the late Mrs. Timothy Eaton, received its charter as The Margaret Eaton School of Literature and Expression in 1906. For many years with Emma Scott Raff, afterwards Mrs. George C. Nasmith, as its principal, it carried on courses in both expression and physical education. In 1926 the school was re-organized, the department of expression was dropped, and with it part of the school name. It now became The Margaret Eaton School, a professional school for the training of physical directors and instructors under the direction of Miss Mary G. Hamilton, for many years head of the physical education department in the old school. When Miss Hamilton resigned in 1934, Miss Florence A. Somers became the director and continued the development of the school and of the courses offered, to the present high standard.

The success of its graduates in positions throughout Canada, the United States and in foreign countries is proof of the adequate training being given by The Margaret Eaton School for those who wish to specialize in the fields of health, physical education and recreation.

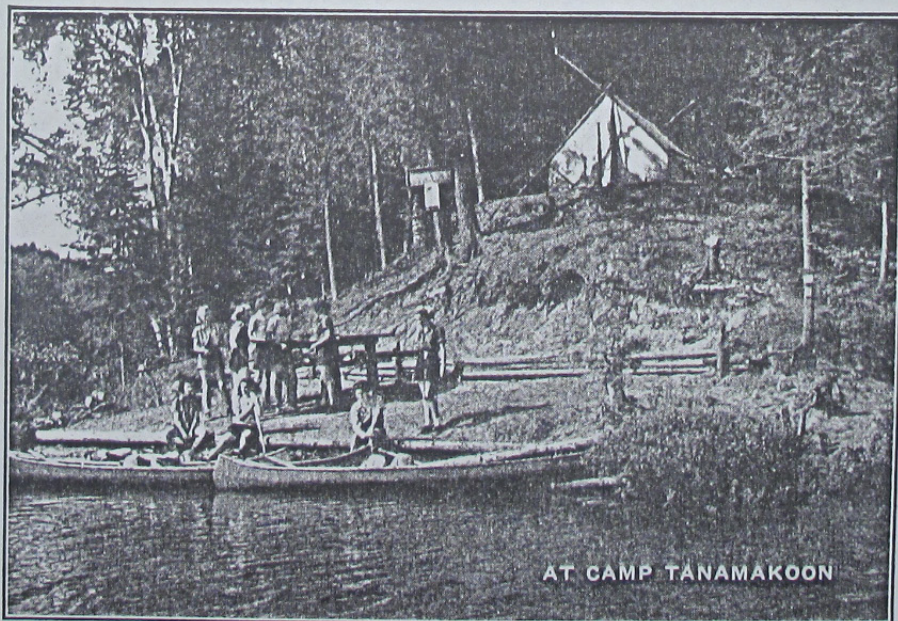

Life at The School

As Toronto is a centre for cultural life, students at The Margaret Eaton School have many opportunities for broadening their interests through attendance at lectures, concerts and art exhibits. These with the school functions, held under the direction of the faculty or of the Student Government and Activities Association provide the necessary social life.

AT CAMP TANAMAKOON

AT CAMP

In order to train its students for positions as camp counsellors, The Margaret Eaton School spends the month of September each year at one of the large camps in Ontario where specialized work is taken in the teaching of camp activities as well as in the field of camp education. One of the favourite places for this training is Camp Tanamakoon in Algonquin Park, owned by Miss Mary G. Hamilton. This camp offers an excellent opportunity for work in camp craft, canoeing, swimming, diving and for overnight trips. For the past two Septembers the school has been at Tanamakoon. In 1940 the camp training as well as some of the work in outdoor sports, will be taken at the Ontario Athletic Commission Camp, Lake Couchiching.

IN THE CITY

Buildings and Equipment

The Margaret Eaton School is situated at the corner of Yonge and McGill Streets, Toronto. In this building there are adequate lecture rooms, social rooms, and thoroughly equipped gymnasiums for remedial and regular classes, as well as a dancing studio and a swimming tank with modern filtration plant. A wide collection of books relating to the field of health and physical education and recreation, as well as professional magazines, provide a library useful for study and research.

Suitable space for field sports is provided at one of the city parks in the fall. The indoor rink at the University of Toronto Arena is available for skating and hockey instruction during the winter season. For teaching practice, the school secures each year through the courtesy of the Board of Education, the use of three or four public schools where the senior students teach regular classes of the school each week under supervision.
